PRICE THREE CENTS

DR. M'CONAUGHY, EDUCATOR AND AUTHOR, PASSES

Brother of Local Woman and Graduate of College; Religious Editor.

HOLD FUNERAL ON SATURDAY

Dr. James McConaughy, 77, educator, author and editor, native of Gettysburg and valedictorian of the class of 1875 at Gettysburg college, died of a heart condition at his home, Alden Park Manor, Germantown, Philadelphia, Thursday.

Dr. McConaughy was a son of David M. and Leana Mathews Welsh McConaughy, and was born in Gettysburg March 30, 1857. The late David M. McConaughy was a member of the Adams county bar from 1845 until he died in 1902, and served as a state senator from this district from 1865 to 1868.

In a recent issue of the London, England, "Town and Country Review," the following interesting sketch of Dr. McConaughy's life was given:

Religious Editor

"Dr. McConaughy relinquished his position as editor of the Sunday School World and other publications of the American Sunday School Union with the July issues of 1930, after eighteen happy and useful years. This took place under the Retirement Plan of the Society, although it left Dr. McConaughy in full vigor and unabated spirit.

"The entire lifetime of Dr. McConaughy has been spent in teaching the Bible and promoting its use in Christian service, a fact that was referred to when announcing the publication of the first book of a new four-part course in Bible study: Dr. McConaughy's 'The Book To Know,' the first and second parts covering the Old Testament and the third and fourth the New Testament.

"The occasion was taken to refer to the fact that Dr. McConaughy had commenced as a Y. M. C. A. secretary in Harrisburg, Pa., and in New York City, where for a dozen years, as one aspect of a busy life, he taught large Bible classes of young men. At the invitation of D. L. Moody he then became head of the Bible Department of the Mount Herman School for Boys, and teacher in Summer Conferences established by Mr. Moody for college students and others at Northfield, Massachusetts.

Promoted S. S. Work

"During twenty years at Mount Herman some 5,000 boys and young men studied the Bible under him. Today the majority of these have responsible positions in business and in Christian work throughout the United States and in other lands. Since 1912 he has devoted his Bible knowledge to the editing of many publications of the American Sunday School Union, the pioneer society for promoting Sunday School work in America."

Dr. McConaughy was twice married, his first wife, the former Miss Eleanor Underhill, of Brooklyn, whom he married in April, 1884, having died March 13, 1926. Two years later, he married the former Miss Mary Malvina Wentworth, of South Hadley, Massachusetts.

The deceased is survived by his second wife and three children, Dr. James Lukens, McConaughy, president of Wesleyan university, Middletown, Connecticut; Donald McConaughy, a member of the advertising firm of N. W. Ayer and Son, Philadelphia, and Mrs. William Bailey, of East Hampton, Long Island.

Funeral Saturday

Two brothers, Dr. David McConaughy, of Upper Montclair, New Jersey, and Samuel McConaughy, of St. Petersburg, Florida, and one sister, Miss Mary McConaughy, Breidenbaugh apartments, Carlisle street, also survive.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the McConaughy home, in Germantown, with burial in Brooklyn, New York, beside the body of his first wife.

County Minister Will Wed Saturday

The wedding of Miss Janet Biesecker, of Gettysburg, daughter of John H. Biesecker, Ortanna, and the Rev. Herbert H. Schmidt, pastor of the Mt. Joy Lutheran church, son of Edward J. Schmidt, will be solemnized at 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, in the chapel at the Lutheran theological seminary. Dr. Herbert C. Alleman, a member of the seminary faculty, will perform the ceremony.

Our 1935 art calendars are now ready for distribution. One for each home free. Call for yours. Bender's Funeral Home.

IMPROVE TWO SCHOOL YARDS

Painting of High Street School and Resurfacing Grounds Completed.

Improvements to the High street and Meade schools and reconditioning of the grounds at these two institutions has been completed, according to an announcement today by a member of the school board.

The exterior of the High street school was painted a cream yellow; the iron fence about the property was painted black and the old stone steps in the rear of the building has been replaced with a concrete ramp. The school yard was regraded and sub-graded with ashes and then covered with a heavy layer of loose gravel.

At the Meade school a two-foot concrete wall has been erected around the entire yard. This was done by the school board as a precautionary measure to keep pupils off Springs and Buford avenue and from crossing the railroad tracks that run across the west end of the grounds.

The yard was regraded and covered with sixteen carloads of ashes and then surfaced with loose gravel. Many favorable comments have been heard on the improvements especially upon the condition of the school yards.

The work was done with the assistance of PWA funds.

COUNTY BANKS JOIN FEDERAL HOUSING PLAN

Movement to Improve Town and Farm Dwellings Gains Momentum.

BIXLER HEADS LOCAL BOARD

Following announcement from the office of Edward P. Simon, district director of the federal housing administration, in Philadelphia, that C. A. Bixler, of Gettysburg, district manager of the United Telephone company, has been appointed chairman for Adams county, Gettysburg and Adams county banks said today they are joining with the federal administration in carrying out the provisions of the new housing law.

In order to get detailed information concerning the part the banks will play in the program, Edmund W. Thomas and Charles W. Stock, executive officers of the First National and the Gettysburg National banks, respectively, are in Philadelphia today in conference with housing administration officials and officers of the federal reserve system.

Local Committees

At the same time, Chairman Bixler announces that he is organizing his various local committees, and that it is planned in the very near future to have a conference with business men of the town and county to discuss details of the movement locally. Committees to be appointed include executive, finance, publicity, building and industrial, general industrial and women's, as well as a field campaign manager. All work is of a volunteer nature, no funds being available for administration purposes.

The national housing act, under which the administration operates, is aimed to make funds easily accessible through bank loans to finance private property owners in making repairs to their residences and provide modern improvements at low cost. In the words of President Roosevelt, the law provides "for those who live in houses, those who repair and construct houses, and those who invest in houses." Any town or farm resident desiring to improve residence property or install built-in equipment of any nature, other than movable equipment such as furniture, radios and the like, can find the money to finance their desires through the new law and with the banks or building and loan associations providing the money.

The federal government largely protects the lending organization against loss through the transactions. Loans are repaid by the borrower in regular installments, at five per cent interest.

One Injured in 2 Car Accidents

Two automobile accidents, one east and the other west of Hanover, occurred Thursday evening about 10:30 o'clock. In the former, Richard Dell, of Littlestown, driving toward Hanover, ditched his car at Bair's meeting house. The radiator and fenders were damaged. He told Hanover police, who investigated, that the light snowfall caused his car to skid. Dell's face was lacerated. Other passengers in the car escaped injury.

In the accident west of Hanover, an auto bearing Ohio license plates struck a pole at a curve near Brush-town. The pole fell across the road, obstructing traffic until removed. Members of the Gettysburg sub-station of the state highway patrol investigated, but the car had been driven away in the meantime.

High School Students to Present Operetta Tonight

Final preparations have been made for the presentation of "Oh Doctor," a two-act operetta, which will be given by the Gettysburg high school glee club in the high school auditorium this evening at 8 o'clock. A large crowd is expected to attend.

A dress rehearsal was held Thursday evening and the drill indicated success for the production. An interesting plot interspersed with many delightful, catchy tunes pre-arranged the play being well received.

The story is laid in a sanitarium near the Rio Grande river, owned by a "Doctor Drinkwater," played by Eric Lynch. The doctor, who had disowned his only son because he married an actress, is left with an orphaned granddaughter, "Glory," played by Betty Jane Snyder, upon the death of his wife who willed all her money to Glory on the condition that she spend the last 24 hours before her twenty-first birthday with her grandfather. Glory is under contract to make a moving picture in South America. Wanting her grandmother's money, she decides to send a friend, "Philip," played by Marjorie Grant, in her place.

"Philip," a ranch owner, portrayed by George Amick, is attracted to Honor but an old quarrel between his grandfather and Doctor Drinkwater prevents him from going to the sanitarium.

A letter, given to Honor by Glory, for Glory's fiancé, "Bob," played by Rodney Sachs, who is also at the sanitarium, becomes lost and complicates the plot. However, the story resolves itself into a happy ending in a delightful manner.

Approximately 90 people will take part in the play as members of the cast or choruses.

The operetta is being staged under the direction of Miss Dorothy Brindle, assisted by Miss Relda Green and Miss Ruth McIlheny.

Historian Writes of Place of Peach Orchard in Civil War

By WILLIAM C. STORRICK

EVERY battlefield has one or more points of special interest where some outstanding event occurred during an attack or defense in the progress of the battle. In the annals of the Revolutionary war we are told that at Concord bridge was where "The embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard round the world." In the battles of the Civil war, Antietam had the "Dunkard church," the "Bloody lane," the "Cornfield," "Burnside bridge," and others. At the great battle of Shiloh, the "Hornet's nest" was a noted point. Spottsylvania had its "Bloody angle," and during the siege of Petersburg the "Mine" was the most noted, and other battlefields had some of greater or less importance.

Interest Points at Gettysburg

The battlefield of Gettysburg, on account of its extent and the many elevations and depressions in the topography of the field, has more than the usual number. Another reason is the fact that it was a three days' engagement. After the battle of the first day north of the town, the scene of conflict shifted to the east, south-east, south and west of the town. On the first day "Herr ridge," "Willoughby run," "Reynold's grove," then known as "McPherson woods," "Seminary ridge," "Oak hill," the "Railroad cut," and "Barlow's knoll," were prominent points, and during the retreat the town itself was a scene of conflict and confusion.

On the second and third days "Benner's hill," "Spangler's spring," "Culp's hill," "Cemetery hill," "Ziegler's grove," the "Angle," the "Round Tops," "Devil's den," the "Wheatfield," the "Valley of Death," (along the line of Plum run), "Seminary ridge" and the "Peach orchard" were points of special interest. In addition to these a number of groves, buildings and farms might be mentioned, but, as all of these have been marked with appropriate tablets they will be omitted. It should be remembered each of these alone was a link and that taken collectively they form a chain of events that decided the result of the battle.

As a description of the incidents that occurred at all of the points (Continued on Page Ten)

FINAL ACCOUNT OF LITTLESTOWN BANK IS FILED

Patrons of Old Institution to Receive 35 Per Cent From New Bank.

LOSSES WILL BE UNDER 10 P. C.

In a 213-page book, the second and final account of William D. Gordon, state secretary of banking, as receiver of the Littlestown Savings Institution, was filed in the office of Prothonotary S. L. Allison here this morning.

Charles E. Gebhard has been deputy receiver of the bank since it was taken over by the department of banking on September 22, 1931. Samuel B. Melsenhelder, Esq., of York, was special counsel for the deputy receiver.

The final account lists assets under inventory and appraisal amounting to $636,971.98, representing cash on hand of $222,803.34, and other unconverted assets of $414,168.64.

Lists Liabilities

Liabilities aggregating $1,090,101.84 are shown by the account, listing $25,000 owed the commonwealth of Pennsylvania; $36,138.65 demand deposits; $572,991.32, savings deposits; $7,397.47, Christmas savings deposits; $437,485.85, certificates of deposit; $2,147.52, treasurer's checks; $20, certified checks; $7,740.95, deposit liability reserved for possible future offsets; $784.11, general claims allowed, and $395.97, unknown creditors.

The account shows payments totaling 45 per cent of deposits have been made on four occasions since the bank closed. The total of these payments, made on December 22, 1931, 20 per cent; April 26, 1932, 10 per cent; August 11, 1932, 10 per cent, and December 22, 1932, 5 per cent, is shown as $487,284.26.

Charter New Bank

Plans for the re-organization of the Littlestown Savings Institution, under the name of the Littlestown State bank, are virtually complete. The state secretary of banking recently approved a charter for the new institution.

As soon as the new bank opens, patrons of the old bank will receive an additional 35 per cent of their deposits from the assets turned over to the state bank by the banking secretary. Other unconverted assets will be turned over to three trustees, whose duty it will be to liquidate them from time to time, paying out the proceeds to the former depositors.

When the affairs of the former Littlestown Savings Institution are finally straightened out, it is probable the depositors in that bank will lose less than 10 per cent of their deposits.

No Change in Condition of Hunter, Shot

Donald F. Richardson, 22, of near Table Rock, who was accidentally shot through the chest by his brother, Cleason, 32, Gettysburg R. 6, in the South mountains, Thursday morning, was reported "holding his own" today at the Warner hospital where he was admitted nearly four hours after the shooting.

Richardson was shot in the back, just below the right shoulder, the bullet striking part of the right lung and emerging from the right chest. Cleason had fired at a deer, kicked up by a party of hunters on a drive. He missed the animal with his first shot and fired again at the deer, unaware that his brother was between him and the buck.

The victim was carried about a mile to an automobile in which he was rushed to the office of a Shippensburg physician, who advised that Richardson be taken to a hospital.

State police here was notified of the shooting and conducted an investigation which disclosed that it was accidental. The shooting occurred in Franklin county, about six miles south of Shippensburg.

$400 FAIRFIELD NOTES FOUND IN HOME OF BANDIT

Police Find Bank Bills In Attic of Steelton Home of Car Driver.

SAYS HIS SHARE OF LOOT $1,100

Pittsburgh, Dec. 7 (AP).—Held as suspect in the robbery of the First National bank of Fairfield, John Fedorka, 25, will be given a hearing today for his removal to the middle federal judicial district, in which the robbery occurred.

He is in jail in default of $50,000 bond.

Federal agents, who arrested him, Thursday, in Cairnbrook, said they found $522 of the $4,138 loot on Fedorka. He also was carrying two guns, they said.

Fedorka told the commissioner he had admitted his part in the robbery. Two companions are held in Harrisburg and New York.

The $400 in new notes of the First National bank at Fairfield, part of the $4,138 loot taken by bandits in a holdup and robbery there, November 28, have been recovered, Sergeant M. O. Harnois, of the local sub-station of the state police, announced today.

The eighty $5 national bank notes, which were received at the Fairfield bank an hour before the daring holdup and robbery was committed, were found hidden in the attic at the home of Anthony Rayk, 25, of Steelton, confessed driver of the bandits' car, Sergeant Harnois said.

Other Fairfield bank notes were found in Rayk's possession when he was arrested at Steelton, Tuesday evening, the officer said.

State police said $742.50 of the bank loot was recovered in Rayk's possession or at his home.

Rayk Got $1,100
Rayk told the officers his share of the $4,138 loot was $1,100. State police said the other two alleged bandits, John Fedorka, 24, alias John Gray, and John Kraly, 26, alias John King, received $1,200 and $1,700, respectively. Approximately $2,500 of the loot has been recovered.

State police announced at Harrisburg today that Kraly and Fedorka were the two bandits who held up and robbed an American store at Shippensburg on two different occasions within the past two months. Rayk, the officers added, did not participate in the Shippensburg robberies, having joined Kraly and Fedorka just a short time before the Fairfield robbery.

2 Are Arraigned

Both King and Fedorka have been arraigned before United States commissioners, the former in New York and the latter in Pittsburgh, and both have been placed under heavy bond on charges of violating the federal national bank act. King's bail was set at $50,000. He also faces a charge of violating the New York state Sullivan anti-firearm act, police asserting he had a loaded pistol in his possession when arrested in New York, Tuesday.

Federal agents are now planning to take Kraly and Fedorka to Harrisburg.

The car which Rayk is alleged to have driven in the Fairfield bank robbery, reported stolen in Pottsville, October 29, and found by Hagerstown city police in a private garage there the day of the robbery was turned over to the owner, Stanley E. Wagner, of Pottsville, by state police, Thursday afternoon.

German Cleanup Reveals Relics

Well-in-Baden, Germany (AP).—Clearances of old lofts and attics made compulsory throughout Germany as a means of defense against air raids, have resulted in some curious discoveries in this neighborhood.

Valuable old coins and documents have been found in nooks and crannies below the rafters, where they had lain in the dust for more than 100 years.

In one old house, a manuscript of great interest in the old Germanic language was found, dealing with local occurrences of centuries ago, also some unpublished verses by J. P. Hebel, a local poet of the 18th century.

SECRECY VEILS COUNTRY'S NRA

Little Information Concerning Secret Meetings of NRA Officials.

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington.—No agency of the "new deal" is cloaked in more secrecy, or its future more uncertain at present, than the once all-important NRA.

The national industrial recovery act creating NRA will expire next June 16 unless renewed by congress, but no one seems to know what the future hold for the Blue Eagle.

Members of NIRA which succeeded General Hugh Johnson as administrator have been at work for something like two months supposedly engaged in the job of salvaging, but no one knows what has been done.

They meet daily in secret, have conferred with the president several times, but that is all the public knows of their operations. The famous "gold fish bowl" of the Johnson era at NRA has disappeared completely.

Studying The Blue Eagle

The official silence on the part of the administrators has given rise to all sorts of rumors as to what the future has in store for NRA.

One day rumor will have it that NIRA is all set to scrap NRA. Another day the report gets around that all the price-fixing and production-control provisions of the codes are to be discarded. Again it is heard that plans are being laid to step-up in industrial production, with the government guaranteeing against loss.

The most plausible explanation of what actually is happening behind the scenes at NRA is that members of the recovery board are doing some intense studying of NRA and the Blue Eagle. The growth of the two has been enormous, so much so, in fact, that the result, some day, is a hodge-podge of contradictions and problems.

Codes were thrown together hastily and without careful study of their effect. NIRA is now going about the task of attempting to restore order and is saying nothing until the job is completed.

They Want It To Stay

There are few, however, who believe that NRA is to be scrapped entirely. They are convinced enough good has been found in NRA to insure its continuance in some form after June 16, 1935, when the act expires.

Several things appear to make this certain.

For one thing labor will demand of the next congress that Section 7A of the recovery act be made permanent or retained in some slightly modified form. And labor is confident it has the necessary number of votes.

Then, too, industry itself in several important instances has no desire to return to the old order.

The administration wants NRA to stay because it provides the machinery for keeping in contact with industry. If the time comes when it thinks it necessary for the government to assume a tighter grip on industry to speed up recovery, NRA might provide the means.

NOTED DOCTOR MISSING; FEARED AMNESIA VICTIM

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP).—Dr. George H. Bigelow, 44, director of the Massachusetts general hospital, the state police announced Thursday night, had been missing since early Monday morning. Captain Michael Barrett of the state police said relatives feared he might be the victim of amnesia.

Barrett said Dr. Bigelow left his Milton home at 7:30 Monday morning en route to his office at the hospital. No trace of him has been seen since. He is a former state commissioner of public health and one of the most widely known physicians in the state.

According to the state police, the missing doctor had appointments in New York on Tuesday and Wednesday, but a check in that city showed he had not appeared.

Turkish Army Has Unique Program

Ankara (AP).—The introduction of the Latin alphabet has made it possible to educate the Turkish army.

In 1924 not more than 10,000 men in service could read or write. Today the figure has risen to above 50,000 among the 200,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen.

All recruits are taught to read and write when conscripted and also given instruction in hygiene while agricultural experts train them so that when their service is completed they can work the soil.

HAD TO SHOOT

"I had to shoot at something," was the only explanation offered by Henry B. Kern, of York county, as he was hailed before Justice Frank M. Fagan, Carlisle, Thursday to be fined $100 for killing a doe in the South Mountain near Pine Grove Furnace.

He had been arrested by Game Warden John R. Spahr, and was the first violator to be apprehended in the present deer season in that vicinity.

AMERICAN 'HITLERITE' CLASHES WITH CONGRESSMAN

A hearing of the congressional committee on un-American activities held in New York broke up in disorder after abusive words between Raymond Joseph Healey, 21-year-old Irish editor and self-styled Brooklyn "Hitlerite" and Representative Samuel Dickstein. Above, Nazi sympathizers were photographed as they gave the Nazi salute outside of the hearing quarters. Below, Healey (left) is shown as he faced Representative Dickstein (center). PLAYWRIGHT A CRITIC HATER

Denounces Critics in Scathing Terms and Receives No Reply.

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York.—Whom the Broadway gods would destroy they first make plenty mad—or so it seems to Elmer Rice.

Mr. Rice, though successful, is a playwright who has been called something of a propagandist, which means that in his plays he can work himself into a very fine lather indeed. And so it seemed nothing more than merely consistent when he climbed upon a figurative soapbox the other twilight and let fly the bitterest and most scathing denunciation of the New York critics that they or anybody has heard yet.

I thought it was great. It made him eligible for the Critic Haters' League to which Miss Ethel Barrymore, Richard Bennett, and so many others belong.

A Hardy Lot

Being no proper after words, Mr. Rice lost no time in referring to the critics as "jaded, bored, stupid, illiterate, and animal-like." Furthermore, quoth he, "there is not a dramatic critic in New York who knows anything about the problems of acting and directing."

You'd have thought this verbal lambasting would have brought retaliation. Not so in New York. Our critics are a hardy lot. Not one so much as wrote in his column:

"Smile when you say that, Elmer." Anyway, I should like to have been present when Miss Barrymore read about it in the newspapers the next day. She has had her innings with the critics.

I recall a recent tour of the nation on which she refused to speak to any critic under 40 years of age. In her opinion younger critics were incompetent and not to be bothered with.

Even this was a concession. On a previous tour, when she was doing "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel," Miss Barrymore granted no reporter favors whatever. Not even Methuselah could have gained an audience. The only way you saw the lady was from your seat on the aisle—unless you cared to stage-door-Johnny it until she left for her hotel.

But it was the lovable and belligerent old fire-eating papa of Constancia, Joan and Barbara Bennett who really got down to cases with the critics. Let him discover an unfriendly critic in the house and he would stop the show, advance to the footlights, and bawl him out.

This happened not once but a dozen times and applied to hecklers as well as critics. Once, in Chicago, he dumfounded everybody by inviting two spectators to leave the theater. They were not interested in the show, he insisted, else they would not annoy the audience and the actors by talking so loud. Having had his say, Bennett stepped back into character and the play went on.

THISTLES NOT POISONOUS

2 HANOVER STUDENTS MYSTERIOUSLY VANISH

Hanover, N. H., Dec. 7 (AP).—The mysteriously coincidental disappearance of two Hanover students—one a high school junior, the other a Dartmouth college senior—who vanished under virtually the same conditions, but on separate days earlier this week, baffled police Thursday night.

The first to be reported missing was the high school student, David S. Low, 16, star halfback on his school's football team and the son of Fletcher Low, assistant professor of chemistry at Dartmouth college. The youth vanished after leaving for school Tuesday morning.

Shortly after police received notification of the boy's disappearance Wednesday night, it was disclosed that John G. Moody, 20, of Derry, New Hampshire, had been missing from Dartmouth college since last Monday night.

Synthetic Silken Yarn, Made From Southern Pines, Shown

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Synthetic silken yarn from Southern pine trees—the first ever made—was shown here Thursday night with announcement of the discovery of a process through which the pine forests of the South can be made to clothe the world.

The making of artificial yarn from Southern pines has been a goal of chemists and a commercial dream for years. The supply in Southern forests is inexhaustible, and literally large enough to meet all the needs

WINGS TO FACE VETERAN CLUB

Masked Marvels Boast of Fine Shooting Players; Play Here Monday.

Local basketball fans are assured of plenty of thrills Monday evening when the Masked Marvels, of Chicago, one of the best road basketball teams, clashes with the Fleet-Wings on the Hotel Gettysburg court.

Mische, captain, and Pasnat, pair off at forward and guard respectively for the Marvels. The latter has never been shut out since playing with the Marvels in more than 200 games. James Oxie, a six-foot, four-inch lad, jumps center and despite his size is unusually fast and a good shot.

Kinsirk, guard, averaged 14 points per game in the first 39 tilts last season. Reak, forward, is a brilliant dribbler and boasts no player can stop him dribbling the length of the floor without fouling him. Tonight Coach Charley Gelbert will send his charges through a stiff workout in preparation for the game. The Wings are facing one of their most strenuous seasons and are determined to open their home stand successfully.

Preceding the main attraction the Sweetland cagers will clash for a second time this season with the strong Hagerstown Moose. In the first tilt the locals eked out a thrilling 39-38 decision and hope to repeat Monday. The first game will start at 7:15 o'clock.

been backing the research, and Morris Poucher, a famous chemist.

The silken white stuff was made from Georgia slash pine and Georgia loblolly. The trees were converted at Savannah into a bleached sulphite woodpulp. In the same experimental plant in which Dr. Herty recently made newsprint from slash and other southern pine.

This newest Georgia pulp was shipped to one of the largest American mills. Without treatment it was run through the regular mill processes, which have been making similar yarns out of Northern spruce and pulps imported from North Europe.

Fast Growth Gives Advantage The great commercial lure of southern pine comes from their fast growth. A good "clothing" crop of southern pines can be raised in ten years—some experts say even less—while the northern trees take up to fifty years for a crop.

Mr. Garvan said that last year the United States imported 400,633 tons of this sort of wood pulp at a cost of about $19,000,000, also that this dress goods pulp is selling now at $70 a ton.

He quoted Dr. Herty as estimating the cost per ton of similar pulp from the South at $35, exactly half.

Mr. Garvan said American cotton markets lost abroad may be replaced by using the same acres to raise slash pine for synthetic yarns and all the newer fabrics of chemistry.

Idid not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

SYNOPSIS: Nicholas Trench, Molly O'Brien, and Jerry Mordant are trying to recover a formula worth millions which has been stolen from Molly by John Osborne, after the death of her father. Osborne has been murdered and Nick just has been acquitted of that deed. But various sinister interests believe Nick has the formula, nevertheless, and these threaten the lives of the three allies. Nick has gone to have lunch with Sir William Avon, the famous chemical engineer.

Chapter 20

SIR WILLIAM'S STORY
"I think we may as well have lunch straight away," Sir William continued. "Personally I prefer a glass of sherry, but perhaps I am a trifle old-fashioned."

"As far as sherry's concerned," I replied, "I suffer from the same misfortune."

"Come along then." He shepherded me through a second door into the adjoining room, where a small round table was already laid for two. In the center was a silver bowl filled with fragrant red roses, while on a handsome Jacobean sideboard stood an encouraging array of bottles and decanters.

I began to feel that notwithstanding his somewhat masterful appearance Sir William and I would get along together excellently.

He talked away pleasantly enough while we were being helped to grouse and French salad, but it was not until the manservant had left us that he made any approach to the subject of his letter. Then, putting down the glass of claret which he had been sipping, he stared at me across the roses.

"Do you know why I have asked you here?" he inquired bluntly.

"I can only think of two reasons," I replied. "One is that you are interested in murder trials, and the other..." I paused.

"Well?"

"The other is that you are interested in something else."

"I wonder," he said slowly, "if you will be offended at my speaking plainly?"

"Not in the least," I assured him. "When I wrote you that letter, I had just finished reading a verbatim report of your trial. It had left me in some doubt, but on the whole I was inclined to think that you were guilty. Since meeting you, however, I have changed my opinion. I always trust my own judgment of men, and I am convinced now that the jury were right."

"I had nothing to do with Osborne's death," I said, "nothing whatever."

"So I believe, and I apologize for the mistake."

I laughed a trifle mirthlessly. "There's no necessity for that. Quite a number of distinguished people seem to have come to the same conclusion."

"Now in your own mind," he went on, "apart from anything that was brought out at the trial, have you the least suspicion why Osborne was murdered?"

I looked him squarely in the face. "Yes," I said. "While he was in America he got hold of a very valuable invention. No doubt several people knew about it, and I imagine that one of them bumped him off in order to steal the secret."

His expression remained quite unaltered. "There was no suggestion of this in your defence."

"I had no evidence," I explained. "Since then one or two things have happened which have helped to open my eyes."

"I should be extremely interested to hear what they are."

"And I should be extremely interested," I retorted, "to hear how they concern you."

"Well, that seems a very legitimate curiosity." He fingered his wine glass thoughtfully. "Suppose we make a bargain, Mr. Trench. I am perfectly willing to lay my cards on the table provided you will be equally candid with me. For different reasons we are both anxious to get to the bottom of this mystery. As it happens I can supply a good deal of information about Osborne, but there are certain gaps in my knowledge which it is quite possible that you may be able to fill in. If you agree with my suggestion I have an idea that we may be of considerable assistance to each other."

I reflected rapidly. I no longer felt any doubt that Sir William had been negotiating for the invention, and that in all probability he was the man whom Molly had seen with Osborne at Aubrey's restaurant.

In that case he could certainly clear up a number of points on which I was badly in need of enlightenment, but would it be safe, me the present stage of affairs, to take him wholly and unreservedly into my confidence?

After all the formula belonged to Molly, not to me, and until I had had a chance of consulting with her. . . I looked up and saw the shadow of a smile lurking round the corner of his lips.

"You are quite right to be cautious," he observed. "At the same time I assure you that my offer is entirely straightforward."

"I don't really doubt it," I replied. "The trouble is that I am not a free agent. What I happen to have found out concerns other people as well as myself. Until I know where you stand in the matter, I'm not sure how much I am entitled to tell you."

He remained silent for a moment. "Very well," he said at last. "If that's the position I am prepared to take the first step. I only make one stipulation. Nothing I say in this room is to be repeated outside."

I contented myself with a nod.

"It was early in June," he began, "that I first got in touch with Osborne. He came to my offices in the City. He described himself as an inventor, and he claimed to have discovered a process for manufacturing a metal which, both from an engineering and a commercial point of view, would be an immense improvement upon aluminum. I need hardly say that I am quite used to this type of visitor, and that as a rule they turn out to be either lunatics or frauds.

"Osborne, however, seemed to come into a different category. He pledged himself, provided I would give him the necessary facilities, to produce a specimen of the metal for experimental purposes. I could submit this to any test I pleased, and if the results proved to be satisfactory, he offered to sell me the invention outright for twenty thousand pounds."

Sir William picked up his half empty glass, and slowly finished off its contents.

"It was at that point," he continued, "that I began to have my doubts. Unless there was something wrong with the business why should a man be willing to part with a secret of this value for what he must know to be an absurdly inadequate sum? Granted that his claims were genuine he could ask practically what he liked.

"There were only two conceivable explanations—firstly that the whole thing was a fraud, and secondly that our friend Mr. Osborne had got hold of something which from a legal point of view was not strictly speaking his own property. In business, however, one can't afford to be too particular. If such a process was on the market, it was highly important, not only to my firm but also to this country, that we should get it into our hands before it was offered to anyone else."

"The matter was far too urgent to hesitate about. I told Osborne that he should have all the facilities he wanted, and that if he could substantiate his claim I would not only pay him the twenty thousand pounds he asked, but that as long as we were the sole manufacturers he should be entitled to a fair percentage of the profits.

"Without some such arrangements there was obviously nothing to stop him from going abroad and selling his secret in half a dozen different countries.

"The first step was to find a suitable place in which he could work. As it happens we have an old factory down on the Essex marshes which we used during the war for manufacturing a certain type of high explosive bomb.

"It's a desolate sort of place—just a large empty building on the bank of a creek up behind the Maplin Sands, and three or four miles away from the nearest village.

"Osborne's demands were not very elaborate, however, and since absolute secrecy was the important consideration, decided that the best plan would be to send him down there and fit him up with what he wanted. I made arrangements for him to board with a man and his wife, who have a farm close by.

"He went away the first week in July, and before the end of the month he wrote and informed us that the stuff was ready for inspection."

Garner Calls President "His Nibs"

Washington, Dec. 7.—John Nance Garner, sometimes called "the forgotten man of the New Deal" and officially called the vice-president of the United States, bestowed on President Roosevelt Thursday a new title—"His Nibs."

He also likened the first Democrat to occupy the White House since the late Woodrow Wilson to that Democrats Republican predecessor, the late William Howard Taft.

Mr. Garner called at the White House in late afternoon for a lengthy conference with President Roosevelt. Departing, he found himself surrounded by reporters seeking to learn the subject of the conference.

"You'll have to ask His Nibs," Mr. Garner parried. "You'll have to ask the boss. You know I never quote the president."

Asked if he and the president had discussed the legislative program, Mr. Garner replied:

"We talked about so many things I couldn't remember just what."

Girl Accuses Lebanon Man Of Shooting Her; Near Death

Lebanon, Dec. 7 (AP).—County Detective George Tucker Thursday night announced Emma Miller, 28, who is near death from bullet wounds, stated she "knows" Byron A. Lauderlich, 60, shot her and "believes" he blamed her for reporting NRA violations in his garment factory.

Tucker said the young woman told him she fell asleep in Lauderlich's car Wednesday night after drinking some "highballs."

Feeling stiff and cold, the girl tried to rouse herself. Tucker quoted her as saying, and fell out of the car.

"My God, what did you do to me, I'm hurt," Miss Miller told Lauderlich, the statement continued. "Take me to a hospital."

Lauderlich In Hospital
Lauderlich, under guard in a private hospital, is charged with "assault with intent to kill," but Detective Tucker said he has not been permitted to examine his wounds or question him concerning events previous to the time he was found at the sanatorium Thursday morning.

Miss Miller, who was found late Wednesday night in a ditch beside a lonely road near the Pennsylvania National Guard reservation at Colebrook, is given little chance to recover from a bullet wound through her back to her left breast, near the heart.

Tucker said Miss Miller, who was not questioned until Thursday because of the seriousness of her condition, told him she believed Lauderlich "blamed her for reporting him for violation of the NRA code" for his garment factory, which employs between 50 and 75 women.

The detective said Miss Miller denied having reported her employer.

Tells of "Date"
Tracing events leading to the finding of Miss Miller on the lonely military reservation road Wednesday night, Tucker quoted the young woman as saying:

She met Lauderlich Wednesday afternoon near her home in suburban Reineboisville and made a "date" for that night.

They met and drove to Hershey, stopping there for sandwiches.

Then they had some "highballs" in the car and Miss Miller fell asleep. From that time until she was roused by falling from the car Miss Miller remembered nothing, Tucker said.

Two motorists who heard screams found the young woman, with a man's hat and a pistol nearby. They reported an automobile sped from the field.

Lauderlich was arrested at the sanatorium Thursday after he failed to appear at his factory and the women he employs were told to go home.

Bullet Holes In Clothing
Investigators reported there are bullet holes in the sleeve and left side of a shirt among Lauderlich's stained clothing which remains unclaimed in the hospital. County Detective Tucker appealed to Judge C. V. Henry for court aid to permit him to question Lauderlich and examine his wounds. He said, however, the manufacturer had been wounded twice.

Miss Miller's spinal cord is severed and physicians say she may "linger" for days, but they have little hope for her recovery. The bullet touched her heart.

Lauderlich has operated an undergarment factory in Lebanon for some years and is widely known. Miss Miller is little known outside of her community. She is the mother of an eight-year-old girl.

Phoenicians Knew First Alphabet

Beirut, Syria (AP).—The Phoenicians were the first of the ancient peoples to make an alphabet of written characters, says Emir Maurice Chehab, director of the National Museum of the Lebanese republic.

Bronze objects bearing inscriptions dating from the 18th century B. C. recently found in the ruins of the ancient city of Djebel prove this beyond all doubt, he says.

Other peoples at that period used only hieroglyphic and cuneiform writing.

BIGLER OPENS COURT SEASON

Boys and Girls to Battle Teams from Littlestown, Saturday Evening.

Biglerville high school's basketball season will get under way Saturday evening when the boys' and girls' teams clash with Littlestown high on the Biglerville court at 7 o'clock.

Graduation has cut heavily into the Biglerville boys' team and Coach Thrush will have a difficult time rounding out a winning combination. However, with each candidate fighting hard to gain a varsity berth and many showing considerable promise, the upper countians are expected to develop into a strong combination.

Coach Thrush has picked two teams but has not indicated his starting lineup. One lineup consists of Lindtved and O. Rice, forwards; Ebbert, center, and Weisman and Martin, guards. The other lineup includes, Gindlesperger, Shue or Kuntz, forwards; Walter, center, and Wolfe and Eckert guards. Kane, Taylor and Wentzel for the reserve group.

Coach Leslie Stock will handle the girls' team again this season and is fortunate in losing but one varsity player via graduation.

The probable starting lineup for the girls' team follows: Slaybaugh and Taylor, forwards; Fohl, center; Shank, side-center; Perrow and Walton, guards. On the reserve list are F. Bucher, Dill, Reinecker, J. Rice, Shue, M. Thomas and Welkert.

During the 1933-34 season, the Biglerville boys won 14 and lost but two games, one to Littlestown. The girls won 13 and lost but three.

The schedule, for both boys' and girls' teams, follows:

INCUBATOR BABY FOUND SMOTHERED IN COACH

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Dolores Ponce, five months old, who was an incubator baby in the show at the World's fair last summer, was found smothered to death beneath the quilts in her baby buggy here Thursday.

The infant's mother, Mrs. Helen Ponce, told police that she discovered her child's death when she awakened from a short nap. She went to Dolores' buggy, she related, and found her daughter suffocated beneath the quilts which had been placed on her carriage to keep her warm.

Hollywood

Sights and Sound

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—The story of the Warren Williams' experience with their three-acre "estate" near Encino, about twelve miles from Hollywood, is like the script of one of those domestic two-reelers, showing what happens when a nice, respectable husband and wife decide to move in before remodeling their new home.

The cast of characters is small: William, handsome, tall and successful picture star whose suppressed architectural complex is about to be given free rein. Mrs. William, pleasant, sunny, home-loving body who is perfectly willing to "move in" to be on hand to supervise the work of rebuilding when the family breadwinner is at the studio. The cook, whose character shall be suggested by her actions. Jack and Jill, the Williams' favorite dogs, blooded wire-haired terriers. And—oh, yes!—the neighbors' chickens.

Practically A Scenario

Scene 1—The Williams survey their new property. William: "Beautiful, isn't it? With just a few changes, of course—and we'll move in while they're remodeling, shall we?" Mrs. William concurs.

Scene 2—Later. The "few changes" are in progress. One alteration has led to another. The roof has come off to provide more room on the second floor. Walls are out to enlarge kitchen and service wing, windows and doors have been removed and replaced with tar paper. It's up to the director to put over the idea that the Williams are living huddled in corners, cooking over an alcohol burner and sleeping wherever they think plaster or timber won't fall. We haven't met the cook, so we'll just suspect how she's taking it.

Mrs. William, scanning the sky through a break in the tar paper: "Dear, are we going to have some unusual weather? I think it looks like rain."

Yes, It Rains

Scene 3—It's raining. Just imagine—well, just imagine!

Scenes 4, 5 and 6 (quick dissolves due to waning space): Jack and Jill dashing through the gate and attacking the neighbors' chickens. It's still raining. The fireplace is smoking. William is looking hopelessly for some lost blueprints. The cook gives practically no notice at all. The phone rings. The studio has cut short Warren's vacation. Stern duty calls. Mrs. William not excessively regretful. She sees opportunity to finish changes already planned before new plans are born.

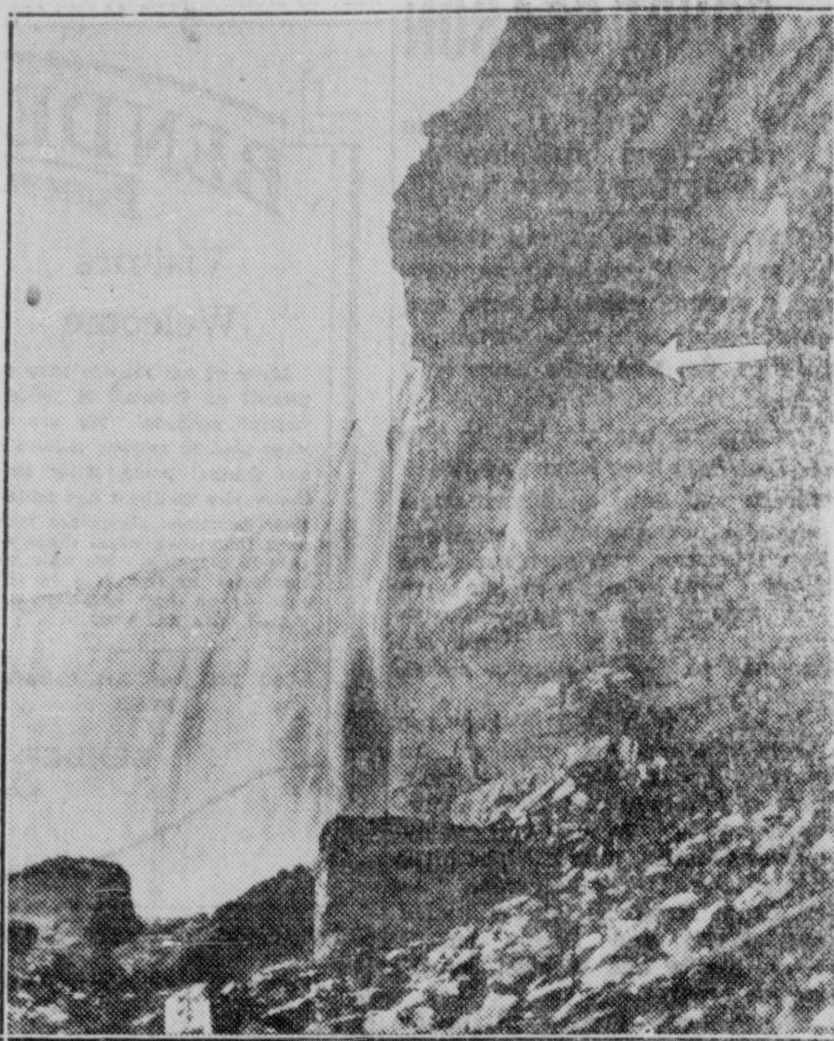

MOTOR RECEIPTS GAIN IN STATE

The state revenue department Thursday reported that receipts from auto registration, operators' licenses and other activities of the bureau of motor vehicles in the first eleven months of this year total $30,579,070, a gain of 6.1 per cent over the $28,805,873 total for the first eleven months of 1933.

Passenger car registrations, up 56,579 to 1,475,524, produced $15,130,990 of the receipts and $831,513 of the increase over last year. Commercial vehicle registrations, which increased 12,978 to 252,676, produced $7,278,132 and $333,293 of the increase.

Total registrations, showing a gain of 75,251 and a current aggregate of 1,790,728, accounted for $23,472,076

Missing Galapagos "Empress" Holds the Key to Island Tragedy

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP).—The mysteriously missing "Empress" of Charles island still holds the key to the final solution of the multiple tragedy of that old buccaneer haunt, the Galapagos Archipelago.

Investigation there by Captain G. Allan Hancock, heading a Smithsonian institution expedition, showed Thursday night death in the bizarre drama had taken four persons from the equatorial "Eden." Two mummified bodies found nineteen days ago the bleak volcanic beach of waterless Marchena islands, one hundred miles north of Charles, were identified by Captain Hancock as those of Alfred Rudolph Lorenz, of Paris, and Charles island, and Trygve Nugrud, Norwegian navigator, of Wreck bay, Chatham island.

A third victim, whose body has not been recovered, was a negro boy who sailed away from Charles isle with Nugrud and Lorenz.

The fourth was Dr. Frederich Ritter, German nudist exile, philosopher and raw-food faddist, whose death by a stroke fourteen days ago in his Charles island home was believed by Captain Hancock to have been brought about by the mental turmoil over mysterious disclosures Ritter had expected to make to the patron of science.

Most mysterious of all, Captain Hancock found, was the disappearance of the Baroness Eloise Bonquet de Wagener of Vienna and of the receipts and $1,215,431 of the increase.

Operators' licenses, with a gain of 62,643 and an aggregate of 2,013,321, yielded $4,026,594 of the receipts and $125,350 of the increase.

November receipts from 1934 registrations, licenses, etc., totaled $238,116, an increase of $5,678 or 2.4 per cent over the same month a year ago.

Paris, and her companion, Robert Philipson, from Charles island July 5.

This was soon after she allegedly had driven from the island, without provisions and water, Lorenz, whom she had brought to the island with Philipson three years ago in a strange flight from civilization. W. Charles Swett, navigator and explorer, who is with Captain Hancock as chief officer of the exploration cruiser Velero 3d, was perhaps the closest confidant in the civilized world of this strange baroness.

She poured her troubles into Swett's ears on his annual visits at her unusual abode beneath the high cliff which buccaneers of old had used as a watch tower.

Swett said that both Lorenz and Philipson came from her gown shop in Paris, when she fled to the lonely isle. Lorenz, said Swett, appeared to be her favorite. He was older than Philipson, and seemed to worship the strange baroness, thrilled at every opportunity to serve her.

Last January, when Swett last saw the trio alive, a change had occurred. Philipson seemed to be the master of the household. Lorenz was ill, apparently suffering from tuberculosis. He seemed morose. Later conditions became serious, and Lorenz fled from the rock and tin establishment of the baroness to the Ritter abode, four miles over the almost impassable volcanic slag.

It was in July, the scientists now have learned from the five remaining inhabitants on the island, that the baroness drove Lorenz away, refusing him food and water, and he embarked in a small boat with Nugrud and the negro lad, bound for Chatham island, some fifty miles away, in hopes of gaining transportation to Guayaquil, Ecuador, 500 miles to the eastward.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York—What distinguished reporters from the mobs that eddied about every police station in town on the day that the Lindbergh story broke was the yellow slip of cardboard known as a police press pass.

These were worn in hat-bands or pinned to lapels so that the police may tell at a glance that you belong. This small, shield-like card is the magic talisman that opens grim doors and permits you to wander along secret corridors. Every active newspaperman in town has one, a gesture on the part of the police to facilitate the speedy gathering of news.

Its wording—if you're interested—goes like this:

PRESS

Police Department

City of New York

The Bearer

Representing

City Editor

Is entitled to pass police and fire lines wherever formed.

To avoid imitation and counterfeit cards, new passes are issued each month. The new releases are always in a different color and each bears the twin signatures of the fire and police commissioners. The old ones are always collected and destroyed.

Don't Lose It!

What all this leads up to is you would be in one awful predicament if at the crux of an important story you should happen to lose this card. It is the one and only identification the police will honor. Lose it and no amount of cajoling, tears, threats, of importuning will move those hard-bolled coppers who have been told that only possessors of cards may pass.

When reporters first went howling down to Greenwich street police station, there was one who did not gain entrance. Just as he shouldered his way through the crowd a hapless fellow felt something push against him but thought for a moment that it was only the jostling of the crowd. When at last he discovered his loss—and he didn't discover it until a cop shoved him violently back and bawled: "To one side, buddy—let the reporters in"—his agitation was something to behold. In a panic, he raced to a telephone and presently a boy from his office fetched a new one.

Enthusiastic Cabby

These cards also hold a peculiar fascination for taxi-drivers, who usually hang on the outskirts of all crowds, hoping in this way to pick up new fares. As they are in on almost everything, they often are on the scene of news breaks and so are well acquainted with all that goes on.

One, in particular, was as curious as a cat. At the time there was a lull. Day had worn on into night, and they were preparing to bring Mrs. Hauptmann downstairs and across the street to a restaurant.

Suddenly the cabby could contain himself no longer. He grabbed a scribe who was standing nearby and excitedly advanced this amusing proposition:

"Lemme borrow your pass, pal—just for a minute. All I want to do is take one look inside. If you will, the cab's yours. I'll take you any place in New York you want to go—and it won't cost you a cent."

Yacht Designer Can't Be Arrested

Gosport, England (AP).—From now on Charles Nicholson, designer of the America's cup challenger, Endeavour, can do just about as he pleases around Gosport.

He has been given the freedom of the city, officially, which means he is subject to none of the city ordinances the ordinary man must respect. He may expostulate on the sidewalk if he feels in a humor, and may cross the street anywhere he doggone pleases.

He is the first man to be so honored by the city.

"If we ever get the America's cup over here, it will take America much more than 82 years to get it back again," said the mayor in making the presentation.

Stokowski Quits Musical Position

Philadelphia, Dec. 7.—Leopold Stokowski resigned Thursday night as music director of the Philadelphia orchestra.

Effective December 26, he will leave after twenty-two years the orchestra he built into one of the foremost musical institutions in the world.

In an open letter to the board of directors, Stokowski outlined two major reasons for refusing the new contract offered him:

1. Inability of the board of directors to select in time to allow for preparing the coming season's plans a successor to Arthur Judson as executive director.

2. "Deep-lying differences" with the board.

Early next month, Mr. and Mrs. Stokowski and their children will leave on a trip to the Orient. The conductor will make a study of Japanese and Chinese music and make guest appearances with several Japanese orchestras.

CIVIL SERVICE BATTLE LOOMS

Job Distribution Via Civil Service Likely to Cause Fight.

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—One of the first signs of what the democrats may be in for on a wholesale basis for a while has made its appearance.

It comes from Ohio (the state which elected "Honest Vic" Donahy to take the senate seat of Simon D. Fess) and from representative Lamneck, a democrat, re-elected for his third term.

Lamneck is disturbed over what he described as the "iniquitous distribution of civil service jobs. There have many such complaints in the past—so many, in fact, that usually scant attention is given them.

Former Senator Smoot of Utah, dean of the senate before the Roosevelt landslide of '32 swept him out of office, constantly was chided because there were so many people from Utah on both republican patronage and civil service lists.

'Rider' May Help

Lamneck, however, apparently has timed his shot.

Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, a democrat, succeeded in having attached to the treasury-post office appropriation bill in the last congress a "rider," now under fire in the courts, which prohibited payment of any treasury funds after December 1 to any employees dropped by the justice department between June 10 and December 31, 1933.

This "rider" has brought about the dismissal of some 960 employees of the treasury department. "Hoover republicans" is the way McKellar describes them.

Encouraged by the McKellar "rider" (it was only recently upheld by the comptroller general) Lamneck has served notice that patronage henceforth must be distributed under provisions of the state apportionment rule.

"Some states," he says, "have three or four times as many jobs as they are entitled to, while others have none."

Hired in A Rush

The civil service commission agrees with him. Lamneck says that the state apportionment system is out of whack. They blame it on conditions which prevailed during the world war.

Then, people had to be hired in a rush. There were more jobs than applicants. Jobs had to be filled regardless of where people came from.

Since then, the commission says, it has refused to certify eligibles from states in excess when there were persons on hand from states still shy of their quotas.

Regardless of that, however, Lamneck is insistent that something be done. "Somebody's going to catch the devil" is the way he expresses it.

With the McKellar "rider" as a precedent he might make it embarrassing for the democratic patronage dispensers—even the chief dispenser himself, "Big Jim" Farley.

CAPITAL Ins and Outs

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—Few political observers here believe that President Roosevelt will make any radical departure in his strategy of handling the incoming congress from that he employed in dealing with the last.

His method during the last session was to compromise rather than fight. There has been nothing so far to indicate he plans to discard that formula.

It worked for him before. Glance at the record:

The White House compromised last winter with the silverites, with the backers of the railroad pension bill and the Frazier-Lemke farmers' bankruptcy act.

At the same time, however, it managed to head off the bonus, the McLeod bank pay-off bill, the currency inflationists and some of the more "exaggerated" spending measures.

A 'Spending' Congress

The president will have much the same situation with which to contend in the coming session. The next congress promises to be in a spending mood, perhaps even more so than the last.

The big test will come with relief. It has been indicated at the White House the budget for the fiscal year beginning next July 1 will be about as large as that approved by congress for regular and emergency expenditures during the present fiscal year, or about $7,500,000,000.

Past experience has shown that as a rule members of congress have a tendency to demand larger sums for relief than proposed by the administration.

However must the administration might wish to limit the total outlay, in the face of unemployment figures recently made public by the American federation of labor as well as other factors, it might find congress reluctant to acc-

The "new" Hollywood, scrubbed clean of its objectionable features in the recent drive for better, safer and saner pictures turns the spotlight on its child stars, six of whom are shown above. Above, center, is Shirley Temple, flanked by two young ladies who are challenging her right to top honors, Baby Jane (left) and Cora Sue Collins (right). Below, Baby Leroy (center, below) is receiving competition from Billy Lee (left, below) and David Holt (right, below). (Associated Press Photos) cede to its wishes.

A 'Reasonable' Figure

Mr. Roosevelt's task, therefore, will be to arrive as a figure he can reasonably expect to hold against the onslaught of those who would spend to the limit. That figure, too, must not be so large as to scare capital.

If he is successful—and a more difficult task hardly can be imagined—half of the victory will be won.

The incoming congress may be convinced that spending is the most popular function of government at present with the mass of voters. It's up to President Roosevelt and his aides to keep expenditures within reasonable limits without sacrifice of his command and leadership.

BURGLAR BY PROXY

Laurinburg, N. C. (AP).—F. Martin, a barber here, was held up at pistol point recently by a nineteen-year-old negro boy who confessed after he was disarmed that others had sent him there to steal coal.

Kirk Prather, candidate for the democratic nomination for governor of Kansas, toured the state in an airplane.

An Open Letter from Mares Sherman

To My Friends and Patrons of Gettysburg and Vicinity:—

Every once in awhile you hear someone say that Gettysburg Stores are not fully equipped to provide every variety of dry goods merchandise desired. If that statement ever were true in fact—and we doubt if it was—we want to take this means of telling the good people of Gettysburg, Adams County and surrounding territory, that the stores of Gettysburg are replete today with a large variety of the choicest merchandise, stylish and fresh, sufficient to meet the most exacting demands of the public, at lower prices than can possibly be obtained elsewhere, and GUARANTEED TO FIT.

A more diversified line of Christmas Gifts cannot be found anywhere else as is available today in the stores of Gettysburg merchants! And in addition to the many advantages at all times of dealing with home merchants, customers have the additional advantage during the Christmas season, when purchases are made for gifts for relatives and friends, that they need not go far to exchange their gifts if the gifts do not exactly please in every way, including fit, the relatives and friends for whom they were purchased. Sherman's and all other Gettysburg merchants will cheerfully exchange, either before or after Christmas, any gift purchased that may not exactly fit or please the one for whom the gift was purchased. And you won't have to make a long and expensive automobile trip to negotiate the change of the item or items.

We want to emphasize that Gettysburg's stores are replete with the finest kind and the greatest variety of fresh, stylish and seasonable merchandise we have ever known them to have!

That is especially true at Sherman's Store. Here we have our shelves chockfull of the very finest selections of new merchandise at amazingly low prices. And the best evidence of the quality of our goods is in the name of the manufacturer—all high-class advertised products, known familiarly in almost every household in the country.

For example there is the finest variety of Lord Baltimore neckwear for men; the popular Hanover dress shirts for men, of every color, style and size, full cut and fast colors guaranteed. Incidentally, ties, shirts and stockings are always the most acceptable Christmas presents for men. We also have a hundred and one other fine Christmas gift suggestions for men, which suggest themselves to you as you walk through our store and look over our merchandise. By the way, there isn't a finer selection of stylish hats for men to be found anywhere within a radius of fifty miles of Gettysburg than you have to choose from at Sherman's.

Be sure to come in to Sherman's Store to look things over before you buy. You will not be obligated in any way and we are sure you will find a view of our gifts a real genuine treat. Beginning Monday evening, December 10, Sherman's, along with most, if not all other Gettysburg stores, will be open every evening until Christmas. We strongly recommend that you purchase your gifts and supply your own needs for new, stylish, serviceable clothing just as soon as convenient, although we intend to keep our shelves fully stocked right up to the Night Before Christmas.

We are confident that if you patronize Gettysburg Stores, you will have no occasion to experience the regrets that those few who go out of town to buy usually face when they find, after getting home, or upon presenting their Christmas gifts, that the purchases are not entirely satisfactory in every respect. Sherman's and every other Gettysburg store stands ready and willing to make things exactly right at all times in a courteous and friendly manner.

Yours sincerely,

Sherman's Store

RICHBURG CHALLENGES BUSINESS

Donald Richberg (left), President Roosevelt's recovery coordinator, challenged the ability of private business to fight its way out of the depression alone at the meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York, but he didn't appear to be taking things too seriously as he claimed the ear of C. L. Bardo (right), president of the association, at the manufacturers' dinner. (Associated Press Photo)

'MARINA HATS' THE LONDON MODE

Style trends in London being about as responsive to current events as in America, "Marina hats" have become the latest millinery rage there, since Princess Marina of Greece married England's Duke of Kent. Here a group of London shopgirls is trying on hats modeled after the Marina manner. (Associated Press Photo)

Kiss From Bride Is Clerk's Fee At East's Newest Gretna Green

Harrison, N. Y., Dec. 7 (AP).—A kiss on the lips of the bride is the "fee" exacted by Town Clerk William A. Wilding, who almost single handed has made this town into the East's newest "Gretna Green," particularly favored by couples from Broadway and Hollywood.

Marilyn Miller, Ruth Chatterton, Sylvia Fox, Ruth Cambridge, Jean Howard, Jean May and Frances Dee are some of the stage and screen stars from whom Wilding has exacted his "fee" for filling out their marriage licenses.

"Marilyn Miller—there was the thrill," Wilding said Thursday night. "I can still feel it. She kissed me twice. It was no stage kiss."

He missed kissing Lila Lee Wednesday morning because he didn't know it was she, and there were "too many witnesses," he said sadly.

Wilding has issued 2,500 marriage licenses, mostly to out-of-towners, in a little less than five years. Not only has he won a tremendous number of kisses but he has trebled the town's revenues from licenses.

The kissing clerk is middle-aged, married and shy about his age—"even my wife doesn't know." If he had white whiskers and a red suit, he would look like Santa Claus. He has a son in college.

The town gets $1 from each license. The state gets the other dollar, the judge or minister who performs the ceremony gets from nothing up, and the clerk rarely is tipped. So Wilding started his own fee system, assessing the bride.

Cash tips he does get go to private charities.

Seven Election-Eve Shooting Defendants Fail to Get Freedom

Pottsville, Dec. 7 (AP).—Seven men, held in the election eve shooting, in which five persons were killed, lost their fight for freedom Thursday night as Judge Henry Houck denied writs of habeas corpus and also refused to release them on bail.

Contending that evidence submitted was insufficient to hold former County Detective Joseph J. Bruno and six members of his family on murder charges, Defense Counsel Charles E. Berger asked for the release of the seven defendants.

After this motion was denied, he moved the court to admit them to bail, but Judge Houck ruled that the testimony of fourteen witnesses called by Special Prosecutor Al Thomas was sufficient to hold the men for the grand jury. The five men were killed and others wounded as they marched in an election campaign parade.

Betty Luchetta, of Kelsyres, who was sent to jail after an alderman's hearing, when she said she had forgotten certain details of the shooting, testified Thursday that fear had caused her to "change my story" at that time.

She testified she was in a second floor room in the Bruno home with Joseph Bruno and his brother, Philip, and was told "to get out" by the former detective, who was also a republican leader. She went to another room, where, she said, she saw Alfred Bruno, son of Joseph Bruno, break a window with a gun, but said he also ordered her to leave.

Mrs. John Ritsieg, marching with her two children in the election eve parade, told of seeing James Bruno, one of those held, step from his father's home and fire a pistol into the crowd after shouting: "What in the hell are you parading around here for?"

She added she saw someone fire from a second-story front window of the home of Joseph Bruno, James' father and former Schuylkill county detective and republican leader.

Josephine Negri, 23, testified she saw James shooting and saw a gun thrust through an upstairs front window of the Bruno home.

Sam Muscarelli told of seeing Joseph Bruno point a gun through a window, but added he did not see Bruno fire.

Charles Grego related how a bullet ricocheted from the pavement near him as he marched beside William Forke. He said he ran a block, thinking Forke was safe, before learning his companion had been wounded fatally.

Other witnesses told how the victims collapsed on the street under the rain of bullets fired in what police have said was the culmination of a factional political feud. Meanwhile, Coroner T. C. Fegley called an inquest into the shooting for 1 p. m. today at Tremont.

The prisoners, Anthony Orlando and Joseph, Arthur, James, Alfred, Philip and Paul Bruno, are charged with murder in each of the five deaths.

EXPECT GIFTS FOR THE HOME

R. W. Wentz Anticipates Buying of Household Articles This Season.

Advance indications that the home itself is going to receive the attention of this year's Santa Claus were being noted by business establishments here, according to R. W. Wentz, local Kelvinator dealer.

"Home remodeling, new conveniences, a wide variety of decorations and household conveniences seem to be in store for the faithful homestead this year," he said. "Business men and store owners report an unusual amount of interest in merchandise of this type and it appears that many people are going to use a considerable portion of their Christmas funds to bring their surroundings up to date.

"There is no doubt but that the success of the federal housing administration's program is being reflected in a general quickening of interest in the entire home improvement idea. Christmas gifts for members of the household, translated in terms of this new attitude, will be reflected in modern kitchen equipment for the housewife, new easy chairs for the head of the house, a change of draperies, lighting equipment and other home features which do so much to make living more pleasant."

New Books

By JOHN SELBY

The preliminary barrage of publicity about the January 13 plebiscite in the Saar has already been laid down. And one Michael Florinsky, associate in economics at Columbia university, saw it coming from afar.

Mr. Florinsky therefore persuaded the university's social research adjunct to finance a summer-long survey of the district with the idea of trying to bring order to the marvelously scrambled impression the American mind has of the entire Saar question. The tangible result of this is a book called "The Saar Struggle" (Macmillan).

At this distance there is no way of checking Mr. Florinsky's findings; the reader will speedily determine for himself, however, that the material as it assorted itself in Mr. Florinsky's mind is brilliantly presented. After acquainting his reader with the background in the simplest of terms, the author proceeds to a statement of possible results:

"The Saar will not vote to be given to France. It may choose to remain under league of nations rule, or to return to Germany. The latter alternative seems quite possible, one gathers. Should it be chosen, the big question will be how Germany can pay for the mines according to Versailles terms. And that may be done, at least in part, by devoting to that purpose the fund in francs which would accrue to the German banks when Saarlanders exchanged their francs for marks. Q. E. D.

Thumbnail Reviews

"O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories of 1934," edited by Harry Hansen (Doubleday, Doran): The annual collection, containing much the same type of short stories that has been collected in other volumes of late.

"The Hands of Dr. Locke," by Rex Beach (Farrar & Rinehart): A literary curiosity, being a little book about a Canadian doctor who appears to cure hordes of people by manipulating their feet!

"What Makes Us Seem So Queer?" by David Seabury (Whittlesey House): The author sorts out for his readers most of the numerous "queernesses" man is heir to, with hints on their causes, effects and relative seriousness; he suggests cures, too.

Boys, Just Boys

"Little Orvie," by Booth Tarkington (Doubleday-Doran): A series of events in the life of a 7-year-old who was, it must be admitted, a problem child; Mr. Tarkington has done three major sets of boyhood studies, "Seventeen," the Fenrod stories about a 12-year-old, and now this.

"Challenge: Behind the Face of Japan," by Upton Close (Farrar & Rinehart): Another book about that island empire across the Pacific; some of those who know more about Japan than this department does and Mr. Close's book "old hat."

"War Memoirs," by David Lloyd George (Little, Brown): The fourth volume of the war premier's caustic reflections on the course of his fellow-laborers in Mars' vineyard; he pays his respects to Haig, among others, this time.

"Cape Cod Ahoy," by Arthur Wilson Tarbell (Little, Brown): A professor writes a non-professional book on one of the world's most popular vacation lands; even the man who never saw the cape can enjoy it.

Yugoslavia Expels Thousands Of Hungarians; Scrap Averted

Szeged, Hungary, Dec. 7 (AP).—Regular Serbian troops, wearing a skull and crossbones emblem, crossed the Hungarian border three miles from here early today and nearly precipitated a battle with Hungarian forces.

Only with the greatest difficulty were the Hungarian officers able to restrain their men from accepting a Yugoslav challenge. The situation was most tense and serious trouble was feared.

Soldiers Shout Threats

Yugoslav soldiers shouted threats and imprecations across the frontier at the Hungarians as thousands of Hungarians expelled from Yugoslavia continued to pour across the border.

Szeged and nearby villages were choked with refugees. Thousands more were coming and fierce indignation prevailed against Yugoslavia in the Hungarian border towns where it was recognized the Hungarian army is far too small to challenge Yugoslavia.

As streams of wretched refugees, many of them so ill as to need hospital treatment, poured across the border soldiers crowded the streets and heavy guards of police surrounded the schools where the refugees were sleeping on army cots.

Second Train Expected

Dusk yesterday found 1,308 former Yugoslav residents being cared for in Szeged, with another refugee train expected soon.

Meanwhile Yugoslav sources said Yugoslav troops stationed near the border were relieved every four days so as to be ready if orders to march into Hungary came. City officials, while discontinuing the reports that an attack was contemplated, said Szeged was prepared to defend itself.

A broken leg failed to prevent the expulsion of Istvan Dieso, 4-year-old boy, who was among the 400 refugees arriving tonight. A woman exhibited twins born only three days before her deportation.

So serious was the condition of seventy-four other refugees that they were taken to the Szeged hospital for treatment.

Twelve of the refugees here were 70 years old or more. Forty were over 60. A blind man, Ferenc Szecsi, said he was carried to the train by soldiers. Two 65-year-old women were leading their 86-year-old blind father.

Many of the refugees said they had never spoken Hungarian, only the Croat dialect. Scores of the refugees said they had lived in Yugoslavia thirty to forty years. Several showed newspaper men discharge papers from the Yugoslav army.

THE FIRST OLIVE

Well, I knew it had to come.
Janet thought it was a plum,
For it looked as large and lovely
And as luscious to the eye,
But the taste of olives first
Is about the worst
Experience I know of
For a little girl to try.With the ample bite she took Came that swift and startled look
Of distressful disappointment
And chagrin and pained surprise;
Dropped the little mouth and chin,
That had shut such vileness in,
And we chuckled at the horror
In her wide and staring eyes.
That a fruit so fair to see
Could so bitter prove to be.
Yes, we laughed to see her frown
As she tried to swallow down
That bitter bit of evidence
Of confidence misplaced.
And I thought until she dies
She'll encounter no surprise
Quite so keenly disappointing
As that first ripe olive taste.Borotra Says Perry

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams
A PROGRAMONE reason why so many people are unhappy is that they do not formulate a program for each one of their days. It was an "unknown author" who once wrote:"Count that day lost whose low descending sun Views from thy hand no worthy action done."In a little memory book which I kept, as a boy, I recall one line which an old teacher wrote there. I often think of it. Here it is. "This day will never dawn again!"I fear that we all take these days of ours too much for granted, as well as life. Each new day finds us just a little nearer to the end of the trail—so that, as a matter of importance, if for no other reason, each new day should be taken more seriously than its preceding one. A definite program will help to make each day a better lived day and each day a happier one for us all.Each day should find us richer in heart, mind and spirit, more mellow and more tolerant. And we should be able to handle the complex problems of life as we gather experience—and I might add, scars.Days go all too rapidly—but they go faster when we have a definite program mapped out, and carry it through. We end such a day with a satisfaction that no other procedure could accomplish.I like the idea of cleaning up as we go—leaving no loose ends, no unfinished tasks. This can be made possible if each day is given its quota—its plan. It is surprising what a great mass of work can be accomplished when a plan is entered into and followed out. A day at a time is a good motto. Not tomorrow, or next week—but today's work today!Each day we should endeavor to make at least one person happier, and to leave behind at least one worthy task, useful to others beside ourself.News From

PATTERN 9210If you are one of the thousands of women with a "figure complex" you'll like the triangular lines of this well-tailored frock. For the dress is cut with an eye to flattering the more mature figure. The skirt panels sweep up to chic points above the waistline and give the long slim look which all of us are trying to achieve today. The bodice closes in a buttoned point and adds a crushed scarf collar for flattery around the back. Make the frock without the collar, and semi-belted, if you prefer—and let the graceful bell sleeves hang open at the wrist, or stitch them into smart triangular flares as is shown in the smaller sketch.Pattern 9210 may be ordered only

"TRIM FOR THE HOUSE," SAYS MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9211

It's a shirtwaist house frock, this spirited and youthful design—just the set of outfit to set you swinging about your house work in record time. The pleated sleeves are cut in one piece with the chic bodice yokes —a neatly notched collar tops the comfortably full blouse—and the long panel, running from hemline to the yoke, is as slenderizing as it is smart. A striped or checked broadsucker, or a bright monotone broadcloth, would be a grand choice for this dress. Then you'll have a frock that will not only be "just right" for the house, but also, when warmer days come along, will be usable as a sport dress.Pattern 9211 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38,

Historian Writes of Place of Peach Orchard in Civil War

(Continued from Page One) mentioned would make too long a story for a newspaper article, only one, the Peach orchard, will be taken up and described in this narrative.

The Peach Orchard (Sherfy Farm)

THIS place is located at the intersection of the Emmitsburg and Wheatfield roads, about two miles southwest of the town. On the afternoons of the second and third days of the battle it was the scene of bloody conflicts between Meade's forces from the front or east and Lee's army from the west of the buildings.

For the benefit of those who do not understand or know the extent of the Peach orchard—which is a thing of the past so far as trees are concerned—it will be stated that the old or bearing orchard at the time of the battle covered a field of about four acres 200 yards south of the Sherfy buildings at the intersection of the Wheatfield and Emmitsburg roads. In addition to the old orchard, the year before the battle a young orchard covering about six acres had been planted east of the buildings on what is now known as Excelsior field. During the battle both orchards were ruined and almost destroyed. Of the new orchard only 114 trees were left undamaged. The young orchard was reset and after it came into bearing the fruit along with what was left in the old orchard was preserved by canning by the Sherfy family. On account of its quality and the care in the process of canning, the Sherfy brand of peaches found a ready sale. After the death of the owner this business was discontinued, and as already stated, the orchards became a thing of the past.

The Sherfy Family

AT the time of the battle the Sherfy family consisted of the father, the Rev. Joseph Sherfy, who was a minister in the Church of the Brethren, his wife, her mother, Mrs. Catherine Heagen, and three sons and three daughters. Of these, two are still living, namely: Mrs. Anna Brumbaugh, a resident of Denton, on the west struck the board fence and at this time grandmother Heagen had a thrilling experience while standing near the fence. The ball after passing through a board of the fence passed through a fold of her dress and having spent its force dropped to the ground near where she was standing, she picked it up and it is now in the possession of Mrs. Hereter, her granddaughter, who prizes it highly, as well she may.

The Return to the Old Home

ON returning to their old home, the Sherfy family witnessed a scene of destruction and desolation. The barn was in ashes; the house, while still standing, was riddled with shot and shell; the fencing was down and much of it gone, and the shrubbery and peach trees were nearly all destroyed. The barn which had been used by the Confederate sharpshooters on the third day was set ablaze by the artillery fire from the Union lines, driving out the Confederates. In the ashes of the barn the charred bodies of 14 men were found who had been wounded and had taken refuge there. The dead, and there were many, had all been buried and the wounded had been removed to the corps hospitals. But, notwithstanding these discouraging conditions the family went to work and in the course of time the old home was restored to a semblance of its former condition.

Troops at the Peach Orchard

THE close and deadly nature of the conflict at the Peach orchard can be realized only when one remembers that the great losses incurred were in a fair stand-up fight, on level ground, without breastworks. The salient angle turning to the left toward the Wheatfield and toward the right along the Emmitsburg road was enfladed on both fronts with shot and shell. The Union troops posted here were the 57th, 63rd, 68th, 105th, 114th, and 141st volunteer infantry of Graham's brigade, Birney's division of the 3rd corps; also the 3rd Maine infantry of Ward's brigade

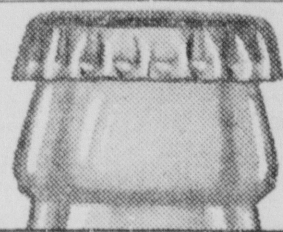

Georgians and the Mississippi troops in command of Barksdale, who was killed and buried at the Hummelbaugh place.

The losses sustained in the Peach orchard by the Union forces has been estimated at 1008 killed and wounded, and 277 missing; a total of 1285. The Confederate losses given, at 950 killed and wounded and 97 missing, a total of 1047.

Confederate Dead Removed From Gettysburg (1870-1873)

Compiled by William C. Storrick

The following is the number of Confederate dead exhumed and removed to Confederate cemeteries in the south. Dr. Rufus B. Weaver, now professor of applied anatomy, Hahnemann Medical college, Philadelphia, a son of Samuel Weaver, who supervised the exhumation and removal to the national cemetery at Gettysburg of the Union dead, superintended the exhumation and removal of the Confederate dead as follows:

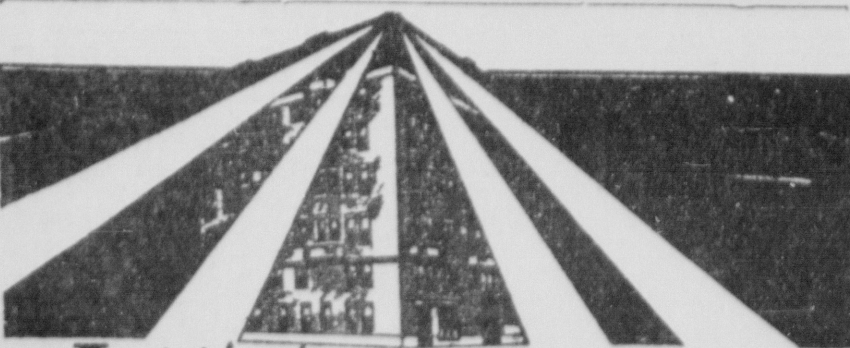

1870-1873—Exhumed on the battlefield of Gettysburg the remains of 3,320 Confederate soldiers. This number was distributed as follows:

- 137 were shipped and reburied at Raleigh, N. C.
- 101 were shipped and reburied at Savannah, Ga.
- 74 were shipped and reburied at Charleston, S. C.
- 2,935 were shipped and reburied at Richmond, Va.
- 73 were individual removals

The above statement was obtained through the courtesy of Doctor Weaver and was taken from his record.

Maryland, and Mrs. Otella Hereter, and the 2nd New Hampshire of Bur-ling's brigade, 3rd corps, also the 3rd Michigan of De Trobriand's brigade, 3rd corps, and the 139th Pennsylvania of the 6th corps, as supports. Excelsior field was held by the 70th, 71st, 72nd, 73rd, and 74th volunteer infantry of the 3rd corps of Brewster's brigade, Humphrey's division. The following batteries were posted there: Clark's New Jersey, Ames' New York, Thompson's and Hampton's Pennsylvania, the 5th United States, and Randolph's Rhode Island. All of the positions occupied by the infantry and artillery have been marked with monuments and markers. Two monuments stand in the yard in front of the Sherfy house; the 57th, and 114th Pennsylvania.

The Confederate troops who crossed the Sherfy land were Wofford's
